Workshop Outline

Measuring the results of your communication goes beyond output; it's about the impact of your communication efforts. In addition, measurement enables you to address your communication plans in real time, and implement risk mitigation strategies if necessary. Monitoring and evaluation is a critical step in determining the success of your internal and external communication efforts, and is the only way to report success to business.

Now an integral part of management reporting, the focus on outcomes is growing in importance, and few companies accept non-empirical assessments. Public Relations and Communication Management Professionals need to plan goals and objectives upfront, and then demonstrate tangible ROI from the implementation of the approved strategies.

What will you learn?

This 1-day workshop provides communication professionals with the skills and approach needed to measure performance as well as a platform to discuss, review and assess their current tools and techniques. The session will also review best practice and share current global measurement standards.

Participants also get to discuss and learn how to:

- Integrate performance measurement principles into communication strategies
- Assess constructive and agile communication measurement techniques
- Create performance indicators into strategic planning and implementation
- Understand the tools available to measure communication in a 360-degree approach internally and externally.
